

FATHER WHO "FORGOT" HIS TODDLER AS HE WENT TO WORK FOR THE DAY RECEIVED NO JAIL TIME

This story made headlines as the news of a father who that his toddler sitting in his car seat was to be dropped off at day care. The child's absence from daycare was never reported. The father went to work. He returned to his car, parked in a garage to find his child unconscious from hypothermia.

Medical staff whom have witnessed children brought to emergency rooms because of the phenomena of having to review the remains of a child left in a car to " suffocate " know that these children not only suffocate to death, but in fact COOK like a well done turkey in which the meat literally falls off the bones of the carcass.

The standards by which judges are allowed to DECIDE what constitutes harm to children - corporal punishment to immanent danger lack insight and judgment in all too many instances and are allowed to prevail without a bar as to what constitutes acceptable Expert CHILD WELFARE standards.

http://www.examiner.com/article/16-dogs-rescued-out-of-hot-parked-car-nassau-bay-parking-lot-owner-charged?CID=examiner_alerts_article